

IEEE/ICE Summer School on Networked Embedded Systems
September 3-7, 2011
Klagenfurt, Austria

Time and Location in Sensor Networks

Kay Römer
Universität Lübeck

Abstract

Sensor networks are a tool to observe real-world events. Time and location are of utmost importance not only to put such events into context, but also for coordination of the sensor nodes among each other. After briefly introducing sensor networks, we will discuss the problems of time synchronization and localization. A focus will be on fundamental challenges, techniques, building blocks, and their performance.